Time and Attendance Leader Opens Six New Regional Offices

AUSTIN, TX – October 29, 2009 – Legiant, a leader in time and attendance software, today announced that it has opened regional offices in six strategic, metropolitan marketplaces across the country. The decision to expand into six more cities reflects Legiant’s commitment to better meeting the business needs of both existing and future clients throughout the country.

For the past eleven years, Legiant has seen an increasing demand for its advanced timekeeping software. As a cornerstone of Legiant’s growth plan, offices in Seattle, Chicago, Charlotte, Phoenix, Tampa, and Houston have been opened this month. These new offices will enable Legiant representatives to develop a deeper understanding of the unique labor management needs of both clients and of each market in general. With this understanding, Legiant will be in a much stronger position to design time and attendance solutions that meet the exact requirements of every customer.

“Strengthening the Legiant presence in these select markets, with senior and experienced personnel, will ensure that every client has the very best support our company can bring to bear,” said Scott Morgan, vice president of sales for Legiant. “With great fortune and hard work, and despite the troubled economy, Legiant has continued to thrive as a company. And with that stability, we will be fully prepared to embrace the future of this industry, the unique needs of our clients and be ready to expand strategically into other markets in 2010. Our clients have made this possible. It is an exciting time at Legiant.”

The addition of these new regional offices expands Legiant’s national presence, and gives the company a dynamic platform from which to build on a successful, eleven year legacy of unprecedented customer service. At a time when other time and attendance organizations are downsizing, being acquired and dissolving, Legiant is moving forward with growth, product improvements and the very best team in the industry.
