Time and Attendance Customers Enjoy Legiant User Conference

AUSTIN, TX – November 30, 2009 – Legiant, a leader in time and attendance software, announced the success of its 2009 Legiant User Conference held in Austin, Texas. During the two-day event, Legiant users from across North America shared experiences and strategies for improving their workforce productivity utilizing the Legiant Timecard system. Attendees represented a variety of industries including healthcare, manufacturing, finance and education.

The goal of the Legiant User Conference was to help clients improve their workforce productivity and lower costs by demonstrating best practices and providing tips from Legiant experts. By providing wireless access to a sample database during the conference, attendees were able to follow along with the instructors on their laptops. In addition to hearing from Legiant executives, a variety of guest speakers provided insight into how they optimized processes with Legiant Timecard. Sharing experiences with other users is one of the highlights of the conference.

“I found the User Conference as a way to quickly gather valuable tips and techniques from the Legiant team and exchange ideas with other users,” said Bob Burlando, Director – Finance & Procurement at Horizon Lines. “We’ve already implemented half a dozen time-saving ideas learned at the conference. The conference is unique because the users attending are speaking directly with the senior people at Legiant to understand how the system works, and provide input on future enhancements.”

The Legiant User Conference is held annually in Austin, Texas for customers and prospective customers of Legiant. The conference includes hands-on training, peer discussions, and tips from senior management. User conference attendance also includes a dinner in downtown Austin hosted by Legiant and a tour of Austin’s famous 6th street.
